DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT REMEDIES WILL NOT ONLY CURE CONSUMPTION, BUT THEY WILL PREVENT IT.

When I assert that Consumption can be cured, I mean precisely what I say. It would be superfluous to say that I do not mean to say that one who has been destroyed could be restored again.

THE COURAGE TO try Schenck's remedies, and whose faith and courage were rewarded by a PERMANENT CURE.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED, or whether, as so many prominent medical men have boldly declared, it is incurable?

DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT REMEDIES WILL NOT ONLY CURE CONSUMPTION, BUT THEY WILL PREVENT IT.

When I assert that Consumption can be cured, I mean precisely what I say. It would be superfluous to say that I do not mean to say that one who has been destroyed could be restored again.

Patients have been brought to me who were afflicted with violent rattling coughs, heavy and exhausting night sweats, such that they could not sleep, and emaciation, and depressed the mental faculties.

Some of these desperate cases, it is true, were not cured, but they were those who applied for help when human help was unavailing, and nothing short of a miracle could have wrested them from the grasp of death.

UNANSWERABLE TESTIMONY OF T. S. Sheldon of New York, page 23 of my pamphlet of Mrs. Lanning, of Philadelphia, on same page; and of Mrs. Charles Neil of New York, on the succeeding page, as well as the many others that precede and follow them, and then ask yourself whether CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED.

Reader, let the fact be indelibly impressed upon your mind that Consumption is AN INSIDIOUS DISEASE. It does not attack the system openly and boldly, but makes its advances by stealthy and cautious, but none the less certain, steps.

It pursues him with relentless hostility to the grave, unless such remedies are resorted to as will serve to check its destructive career. How few there are who can be made to believe that they are consumptive until rattling cough, prostrating hemorrhages, emaciated frame, hectic cheeks, wasted strength, lost appetite, and evening night sweats declare by tokens too plain to be mistaken that Consumption has laid fast hold and secured a firm foothold, which it is determined to maintain to the last gasp of the unhappy sufferer!

Its approaches are quiet and almost unperceivable; but they are steady and sure, and withstanding. Step by step it makes its way into the system, and it is only when it has secured full and complete possession that the alarming signs and symptoms present themselves in all their fearful truthfulness.

If people would but for a moment reflect—if they would but endeavor to obtain a more thorough knowledge of their own physical system, and would pay close attention to its wants and requirements, how much less fearful and extensive would be the prevalence of PULMONARY DISEASE!

But the majority of people will not give this important subject more than a mere passing thought, and sometimes even neglect to attend to it, until an ancient axiom which should be deeply impressed upon every man and woman's heart, not merely in regard to the spiritual, but to the physical nature also, how few there are, comparatively speaking, who have anything like a proper conception of either, and yet how vitally important it is that we should be familiar with both.

Individuals who have studied the wonderful construction of the human body, and who is familiar with not merely the location of the various organs, but with their functions also. Such persons, unless they are absolutely indifferent to their health and happiness, give heed to the warnings that nature gives.

THE PRECURSORS OF CONSUMPTION, instead of being regarded as a matter of trivial importance, becomes with them a subject of serious concern. They contrast its characteristics with those of the cough that results from a slight or even a severe cold, and their familiarity with the subject enables them to detect the marked difference, and unless they are reckless of the sad consequences, they at once SEEK FOR A REMEDY.

and where this is done, as it always should be, in the incipient stages of Consumption, promptly and judiciously, the evil result is almost certain to be averted. This should be the course pursued by those who have NATURALLY WEAK BREASTS, who are liable, as people say, "to take cold easily," and whose physical conformation indicates a tendency to PULMONARY DISEASE.

Were this matter attended to as it should be, ninety-nine out of a hundred of the American people be shorn of its terrors. ATTEND TO THAT COUGH, and note its progress. If it is dry and hacking, if the secretions of the throat are scanty and suspended, and the mucous membrane becomes swollen, its color redder than natural, and its sensitivities partially destroyed, it is time to adopt precautions for its removal. As the cough progresses, severity, if there is a tendency to chilliness, and generally more or less fever, difficulty of breathing, and a painful sense of oppression on the chest, a constant thirst, and a light coating of the tongue, rest assured of the fact that you HAVE NO TIME TO LOSE.

When such a cough sets in, let it be your first object to remove it. But do not permit it to continue its course unchecked. You may recover without the use of medicines, but in this country the chances are that you will not, and this apparently trifling cough may carry you TO THE GRAVE.

In such cases those who will can always find a safe and sure remedy. Use Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup regularly in moderate doses, and a box of Schenck's Mandrake Liver Pills in connection with the Syrup. Use the Pills freely, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred THE COUGH WILL BE REMOVED.

Hundreds and thousands have tried these remedies and to-day are living, healthy witnesses of their efficacy. Citizens could be filled with testimonials of THE WONDERFUL CURES performed by them. But this would be unnecessary, for he who is in time, and sees to it that the golden opportunity is not frittered away, and that the disease which is annually sweeping thousands to a premature grave, does not obtain such a foothold as will render its eradication almost or absolutely impossible.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." A cough that is fully removed by the use of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup and Schenck's Mandrake Liver Pills will not, unless the individual is totally reckless and indifferent to his or her health, ever return, or at least not speedily, for the reason that the action of these thoroughly-tested medicines leaves the system in a condition which almost BIDS DEFIANCE TO DISEASE.

They fortify it by bringing the stomach and liver into such a healthy condition, that the attacks of disease become powerless. Such are their peculiar merits, and it is upon these merits they are offered to those who are afflicted with incipient pulmonary attacks. Try them, and see if you are not one of the thousands who are doing so to-day.
